My father was diagnosed with a brain tumour in March or April 1992, he had suffered with minor blackouts lasting just split seconds, for which he was not aware. Step Mum had noticed him occasionally staggering and got him to see the doctor. All appeared well until about June when he was diagnosed with cancer. Towards the end of July he started to deteriorate rapidly and was not well enough to attend my wedding to Sally. On return from our honeymoon, I called in at my daughters Cathryn and was told to go straight to the hospital as my father was in a serious condition. I arrived there about The middle of the
